John Radford is a bachelor, a man of some means, is somewhat deaf, and is always anticipating that he is about to be robbed. Last night one of his nearest neighbors, young Mr. Waddell, was going home, when he discovered Radford's bouse on fire, and hurriedly ran to awaken the intentes. He knocked and pounded on the door, but no resource came. Knowing the old man's sponse came. Knowing the old man's deafness and fearing he would be burned with the house he throw his weight against the door, which gave way. In the ford, supposing it was a robber, shot him with a charge of buckshot in his left side, hilling him instantly. The house burned to the ground, only a few household goods being sayed.
